From the Principal's desk

Every parent longs for their child to be successful in the adult world. Every child also desires to be successful when they leave school. And every school, including ours, wants to provide an education that positions graduates for success in the future.

It is important for all the stakeholders above - parent, students and school to clarify what are the markers for success. In a Biblical view of the world, success is not what our modern culture prizes as success, things like high positions, huge salaries or lots of possessions.

Instead, success should rather be framed within a view that takes into account one's positive impact on humanity, and service towards the Kingdom of God. People who enter a profession and use their skills to produce a better quality of life for the poor and marginalised are the ones who can lay a claim to success (even though God should receive the glory first and foremost).

In a country like ours, generational poverty is a reality. Children whose parents are poor are likely to become adults who are poor, and successful Christian workers are striving for solutions that will break generational poverty and create a better life for all.

In contrast to this Biblical Worldview, the world seems to celebrate wealth that is produced through exploitation of the poor rather than betterment of the poor. As a school, we certainly pray that our graduates will all be gainfully employed, but to stop there would be to limit our vision to something too small. Let's rather encourage our students now already that they should be dreaming of not only gainful employment for themselves one day but also using their gainful employment to create gainful employment for many others. This is the nature of God's Kingdom.

It is a big vision but it is a Godly vision.
